Brief

National Ugly Mugs (NUM) is a pioneering, national organisation which provides greater access to justice and protection for sex workers who are often targeted by dangerous individuals but are frequently reluctant to report these incidents to the police. In an effort to reshape and radicalise their work to support sex workers from the margins, this year they have embarked upon outreach projects which platform and elevate BIPoC voices through giving their resources over to BIPoC voices to use. In order to protect and learn from those who have historically been silenced, NUM has funded FemmeDaemonium's black, queer sex worker unit to carry out a project which truly allows marginalised sex workers to be heard.

Interview Details

In order to aid NUM's development and change to support and protect sex workers, they want to hear from the voices who need to be heard. This interview is a questionnaire which can be carried out anonymously, or for those who are interested in ongoing paid work within the charity there will be positions open to form a BIPoC committee. The questionnaire should take no longer than 20 minutes to complete and can be found here:

ArtZine Submission Details

FemmeDaemonium is a grassroots artist and performance collective of sex workers who seek to subvert the women from mythology and folklore by reclaiming the stories which have forced patriarchal stigma upon sex working womxn. In light of the BLM movement this year, they secured funding from NUM to create an ArtZine which can elevate and pay BIPoC sex worker voices for their lived experiences.

We're looking for entries on life as a BIPoC Sex worker through:

Artwork

Illustration
Photography
Poetry
Short Stories
Journal Entries.

You don't necessarily have to classify yourself as an artist to want to take part. We want the project to be open to all. If you have a lived experience you would like to submit for the publication, we have a team of artists within FemmeDaemonium who are willing to illustrate and edit for the zine.

This becomes a radical act of reclaiming power and highlighting new ways of producing knowledge which comes from the source, is about the source and is the source.
With the space to be paid for future opportunities.
